

NEW BOOK: Serious illness inspired mum of three to put together self-help manual

I wanted my children to know what I'd achieved

FACING death made Coventry author Denise Farquharson realise just what she wanted to tell her children about her life.

An undiagnosed illness in 2005 left the 40-year-old mother of three wondering who would tell her children about her achievements if she were to die.

So she set about creating a new self-help motivational book, called Picture Your Dreams.

Denise, of Longford, said: "I was quite ill in 2005 and I was not diagnosed with anything at all.

"I was off work for almost a year, I was stopped from driving and kept fainting. At times I thought I was going to die.

"It was then that I realised I had three kids, and even though I've done lots of things with my life I did not know whether they would know about it.

"I went looking for some sort of book to put together every-

By Siân Powell

thing I'd done but I could not find anything so I decided to put it together myself."

Denise, whose maiden name is Anderson, attended Coventry's

Blue Coat School before moving to Coventry University to complete a computer studies course.

Picture Your Dreams encourages people to think of an image of what they want to achieve, and to focus on identifying how they set about achieving that goal.

Denise said: "You will end up with a book of 20-plus reminders of everything you have achieved in your life."

Now recovered from her mystery illness, Denise, who works as a software release manager for Severn Trent, is hoping to take her self-help book to America in the future – and will soon be available for talks to inspire and help people to find their dreams.

■ PICTURE Your Dreams is available online and in bookshops, priced £12.99

JB200908book-01

■ REMINDER...

Denise Farquharson says the book she's put together will inspire others to achieve their dreams.

Picture:
James
Balfour